HOPE-FUL! BLISS-FUL!

"Away from the Breakers and About Again."

"The President Will Get Well."

"Everything Goes Nicely."

That's What the Folks at the White House Say.

GUITEAU'S DEFENSE.

Washington, 27.—Some who have a strong conviction that the death of the President is inevitable go so far as to discuss the political aspects of the case. Among other themes that have come to be considered in connection with the President's case, is the probable nature of Guiteau's defense. The bad results of the inconsiderate criticism of the President's attending physicians is shown in the mere suggestion which has been heard dozens of times during the past day or two, that the assassin would raise the plea of death by malpractice.

HIS MOTHER.

Cleveland, 27.—President Garfield's aged mother is stopping with a niece in Hiram, four miles from Garrettsville. She receives messages from Washington and spends much of the time at the front door of the house, anxiously watching for the messenger who brings her the dispatches. She is bowed down with grief, sleeps but little, and that in short naps, and is much agitated by fear for the worst, yet tenaciously clings to hope.

MRS. GARFIELD FUND.

New York, 27.—The Tribune: The fund for Mrs. Garfield now amounts to $156,757.65, and the promoters of the movement seem to be confident that it can readily be increased to $250,000 if the President should not recover. Certificates for $125,000 in government bonds worth $145,281.25 already have been placed in the hands of Mrs. Garfield.

MORE QUEENLY SYMPATHY.

Washington, 27.—The following correspondence by cable is furnished from the state department:

Blaine, Secretary, Washington: I have just received from Her Majesty, the Queen, at Balmoral, a telegram in these words: "I am most deeply grieved at the sad news of the last few days, and would wish my deep sympathy to be conveyed to Mrs. Garfield."

(Signed) LOWELL.

DEPT. OF STATE, WASHINGTON.

Lonell, Minister, London:

I have submitted to Mrs. Garfield your telegram conveying the kindly message from Her Majesty, the Queen. Mrs. Garfield is constantly by her husband's bedside, and does not give up all hope of his recovery. Her request is that you will return to the Queen her most sincere thanks and express her heartfelt appreciation of the constant interest and tender sympathy shown by Her Majesty towards the President and his family in their deep grief and most painful suspense.

(Signed) BLAINE.

THE PELLET PEOPLE.

Cleveland, Ohio, 27.—The principal homeopathic physicians here to-night sent a joint dispatch to S. A. Boynton, Executive Mansion, Washington, reading: "In view of the unfavorable progress of President Garfield's case, and of the deep interest we take in it, we suggest that you use your best efforts to procure a consultation with homeopathic physicians and surgeons."

IF.

New York, 27.—If the President dies and the body is brought here, the postoffice will be closed for the first time in its history, and all business be suspended while the remains lie here.

JAY GOULD.

The Tribune: Jay Gould, to-day, expressed great sorrow at the prospect of the President's death, but spoke highly of Arthur, and thought there would be no shock to the business of the country.

SUNDAY'S RECORD.

Washington, 29, Executive Mansion, 12.30 p.m.—At the morning dressing of the President several yellowish points were observed just below the ear, just over the swollen parotid, and an incision being made about a teaspoonful of healthy looking pus escaped. There was also some discharge of pus through the two openings into the ear and the incision mentioned in the previous bulletins. The wound looks rather less indolent than it has been doing for several days past. Since the morning bulletin there has been some rise of temperature, but little increase in frequency of the pulse, and in other respects no material change has occurred. Pulse 104, temperature 99.5, respiration 18.

HIS BEST SUNDAY.

Chicago, 28.—It is remarked as a singular fact that this is the first

Sunday since the President was shot that he has not been worse, and the conclusion is reached by a somewhat illogical process of reasoning that the day marks an era of recovery as against the preceding era of decline.

SWAIN AND ROCKWELL.

From Washington specials: Maj. Swain, who watched the President all yesterday afternoon, coming out once or twice, each time insisted in a most vigorous way that the President was better than he was yesterday, that his color was better and his expression and manner indicated real improvement. Rockwell insisted upon the same thing, and these two gentlemen have been constantly with the President during his sickness. The doctors, however, were against them. Rebyrn, who came out at 3 o'clock, said there was no change. Indeed, the doctors, without exception, could find nothing to give encouragement, so the unprofessional opinions of Judge Swain and Colonel Rockwell had but little effect in buoying up anyone.

It was said outside that the fact that the President was feeling a little better, was owing to the stimulants given him. He is now, it was said, being practically kept up by stimulants, and when reason comes he will pass into an unconscious condition, and from that into death. This was the opinion of eminent surgeons in charge. In case the President should soon pass into the unconscious condition which precedes death, how long he might hold on after he had passed into that stage was something nobody could say, but when once he had passed into a comatose state there would be no possible hope of rallying. To use the expression of an official who has been inside of the White House, last evening, that edifice appeared to be a "sort of fools' paradise." There could hardly have been more joy if the President had recovered than over certain alleged favorable symptoms. Swain telegraphed his wife, in Ohio, that the "light of hope was broken, which, by to-morrow, may burst into sunshine."

Washington, 28.—Secretary Blaine, at 2 o'clock this afternoon, sent the following cablegram:

Lonell, Minister, London:

The favorable indications in the President's case have continued since the dispatch of last night. His respiration has grown better, and at this hour, 2 p.m., is nearly normal. The condition of the swollen parotid has visibly improved. A slight increase of fever is observable, but was not unexpected. His mind continues clear. The possibilities of recovery, in the judgment of his surgeons, have increased and are increasing.

(Signed) BLAINE, Secy.

JAMES' JOY.

New York, 28.—The following was just received:

EXECUTIVE MANSION.

H. G. Pearson, Postmaster, New York:

Our hopes are reviving. Favorable conditions continue. At 2 p.m. nothing discouraging has occurred. (Signed) WM. H. HUNT,

Secretary of the Navy.

THOMAS L. JAMES,

Postmaster-General.

PRAYER AND ANXIETY.

Cleveland, Ohio, 28.—Bulletins from Washington were read from the pulpits to-day and special prayers for the recovery of the President offered in churches of all denominations throughout northern Ohio. Extra editions of newspapers were published here and bulletins posted in conspicuous places, the announcements of which were eagerly scanned by anxious crowds. A more hopeful feeling prevails.

IMPROVEMENT MAINTAINED.

Washington, 28.—The improvement in the President's condition has been maintained during the day, and to-night hope is stronger than when the noon bulletin was issued. The probabilities of death, it is believed, are gradually lessening. A very confident feeling has taken the place of the despondency which was apparent at the White House last night. Hope has again a strong hold. The effect of to-day's good tidings was everywhere noticeable in the better feeling that prevailed. The gloom has been lifted from the city. The President has rested quietly, and there has been nothing to disturb him. He has perceptibly improved during the day, though it was not a marked improvement, until it could be said at 5 o'clock that the President was better than he was at noon. He has talked but very little, but that was because they would not let him talk. His pulse has remained pretty steady, and retained its improved tone and character. There has not been any marked fever. The beats of the pulse were from 105 to 108 per minute. His general appearance has improved and his skin is soft and moist. At 5 o'clock General Swain sent a dispatch that the President was better than he had been for a week past. Colonel Rockwell endorsed this dispatch, which was not reserved in any particular, but made the statement without any qualification. "He is holding right up to the mark," said Colonel Rockwell. Colonel Rockwell, continuing, said: "There is an improvement all round. I mean to include every symptom. He is going to get well I believe. I remember at the same time that the President is still in a most dangerous condition. It is perceptible, very perceptible, that he is improving."

At 5.30 this afternoon, Marshal Henry, who came from the private part of the house, reported that the President was resting quietly. The heavy sleepiness, which was an alarming feature yesterday, has disappeared.

Secretary Windom said at 6.30 o'clock, as he came from the surgeons' room, that the President is still better.

General Swain said at 8 o'clock: There is nothing in the least unfavorable. Everything is the other way; although the President's pulse and temperature rose slightly during the afternoon he continued to do well, and at 5 General Swain telegraphed a friend: "The improvement in the President's condition is still maintained. Are all hopeful, some confident."

A FAMILY VISIT.

About the middle of the afternoon the President expressed a desire to see his daughter, Mollie, and when she entered the room and came to his bed, he took her hand and asked about her health. She replied that she was well, and inquired how he himself was. He said: "I am better. Ask your mother if the boys cannot come in." Soon afterward James came to the bedside and was greeted by his father affectionately. The President's pulse, however, rose with the excitement and emotion of this interview with his children, and it was thought best not to allow Harry to see him. Late this afternoon Mrs. Garfield and her daughter Mollie, with Mr. Rudolph and C. C. Rockwell, of St. Louis, went out for a drive. Mrs. Garfield looked bright and cheerful. The carriage passed through the main gateway, on Pennsylvania avenue, around which a crowd had lingered all day. She responded with a low and a smile to the salutations of the guard and to the greetings of one or two acquaintances passing in. Some one standing near the gateway cried, "That is Mrs. Garfield," and by spontaneous impulse almost all the men in the crowd took off their hats, and stood with uncovered heads while the carriage passed.

All members of the cabinet called at the Executive Mansion to-day, many of them repeatedly, and there was rather more than the usual number of private callers. The faces of all were brighter and more hopeful, and a general feeling of encouragement seemed to prevail. The evening bulletin was regarded as fairly satisfactory, although the terrible rise was rather more marked than had been anticipated. During the evening, however, the President rested quietly, and his fever by 11 o'clock had subsided.

Dr. Boynton, at 9.30 this evening, gave the following statement of the present aspect of the President's case: In my opinion all the patient's symptoms, to-night, show marked improvement. In the first place, his mind, which was for a week more or less affected by the vitiated and impoverished condition of his blood, is now perfectly clear and active. Up to Friday night or Saturday morning I do not think his will power had for six or seven days any sustaining influence upon his body. He had no strong will power. Since yesterday morning, however, there has been in this respect a noticeable change. Not only is he more cheerful and hopeful, but his will has recovered its power of sustained effort, and it is now co-operating with his vital energies in the struggle of his whole being for life. The condition of his stomach, so far as ability to take food is concerned, continues good, and I think there is a further slight improvement in the process of assimilation and nutrition. He has swallowed to-day more than thirty ounces of liquid nourishment, consisting chiefly of beef juice, peptonized milk and milk porridge, and has had in addition two nutritive enemata. This supply of food is entirely adequate if properly assimilated.

It is regarded this evening that the President's rally has been of such a character that further relapse, while among the possibilities, is not probable, commencing at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon there had been up to seven o'clock to-night twenty-seven hours in which the President was pronounced as improving. The improvement has not diminished in strength nor is it less marked to-night. The sixtieth day of the President's illness is regarded by many as a point that is most desirable to be passed. To-day was the fifty-seventh since the wound was inflicted. Dr. Woodward said when the wound was twelve days old that the President might last twenty or thirty days and then die; however, he said, "If the President is alive at the close of the sixtieth day from the shooting the danger will be over and he will live." The sixtieth day will be Wednesday.

The White House this afternoon and evening looked as it did in the palmy days when it was believed that the President was certainly on the broad highway to recovery, and that the desired ending of the sickness was but a short time ahead. There was but very few people around, not counting the three or four newspaper men and employees.

There was nobody in the public part of the house and but very few employees were there. Early this evening as the hour for the evening bulletin approached, the gathering grew larger, but the "bulletin crowd" was not to be compared in numbers to the same gathering yesterday evening. There is considerable comment about the different predictions made yesterday, and to-day by the physicians in attendance. There could not be more different views expressed than those of the last two days when the matter is looked at in the proper light. It will be seen that the statements are entirely in conformity with the progress of the case. Yesterday, for instance, Dr. Bliss said in the morning and at noon that he did not see how the President could live unless an expected change for the better should be made. Again this morning and later this afternoon he said that he thought the President would live, and that the rally which had been made was of sufficient strength, continuing to be augmented as it does, to warrant the highest hope that there will be a recovery. Dr. Bliss said to a Western Associated Press Agent, to-night, that he had at one time given the President up, or pronounced his case hopeless; that it was not his custom to give a case up while life lasted.

"Doctor," asked a Western Press agent, "is the President better to-night than he was this morning?" "He is," was the reply. "He has continued through the day to gain, slowly it is true, but in his present condition that little gain promised much."

"What is your greatest difficulty in the case now?" "The parotid swelling is the most troublesome feature of the case now, and it has subsided some to-night. It is discharging better to-night than it has yet. A while ago it discharged a teaspoonful of healthy pus, not what we calllaudable pus, but it was very good pus. It is discharging through the ear, and I think by to-morrow there will be a very sensible diminution in the swelling."

"Has the President taken much nourishment to-day?" "Yes, he has taken plenty, more than on any day for some time, and he showed relish for it. His stomach receives all we give him, and digests it."

"No sign of nausea, doctor?" "Not a bit, no more than you or I feel after eating. The President's stomach is now in good condition, and he will be built up from now on. He is able to take food enough to impart strength to his system. I regard the blood poison as now eliminated. He is now suffering from the sequel of the poisoning, but I am satisfied the poisoning has been thrown. The wound made by the pistol bullet, to-day shows some signs of returning granulation for the first time in three days. It has been entirely idle during this very bad condition of the blood, but now, as the blood purifies, it will heal."

Judge Jere Black had a long talk with Dr. Agnew this afternoon about the President and his prospects. Dr. Agnew said the improvement which set in yesterday afternoon had been maintained, and there was now substantial ground for hope for the President's final recovery. He said the tone of the President's stomach showed remarkable improvement, and his food was evidently assimilating better than heretofore; that if this kept up for twenty-four or thirty-six hours longer, and he now believed it would, the President would begin to regain strength, the one thing necessary to pull him through. Dr. Agnew spoke of the improvement as general and said the President's chances were now favorable to say the least.

About 9 o'clock Dr. Bliss sponged the President off and he went to sleep. When the house was closed everything looked favorable and a good bulletin was confidently expected to-morrow morning.

MONDAY'S PROGRESS.

Washington, 29.—Executive Mansion, 8.30 a.m.: The President's symptoms this morning are as favorable as yesterday at the same hour. He slept, awaking at intervals, the greater part of the night. At these intervals he took and retained the liquid nourishment administered. His mind continues perfectly clear. Pulse 100, temperature 98, respiration 17.

HAMILTON.

New York, 29.—Dr. Hamilton informed a Times reporter, this morning, that he believed now the President will live. We have every reason to hope that the improvement now noticeable will be maintained. He returns to Washington on Wednesday.

Washington, 29.—Executive Mansion, 11 a.m.—At the morning dressing of the President's wound the parotid swelling was found to have diminished sensibly in size since yesterday morning. There had been a plentiful discharge of pus during the night from three openings. Another yellow spot was discovered on the side of the face this morning which, when pricked, permitted the free discharge of pus from another pus pocket. The wound in the body was found to be doing well. It still continues to discharge freely. The character of the pus discharged has not changed materially since yesterday, but is thicker and healthier than a few days since. While dressing and cleaning the wound this morning, the cleansing catheter entered to a depth of fully twelve inches. Dr. Boynton, who was in the sick room the greater part of last night, says the President passed a good night, sleeping most of the time. His sleep was more natural than on any night during the past week. During intervals of wakefulness, his mind was perfectly clear. Once about 2 a.m. when awake and while taking some nourishment, he remarked to Dr. Boynton, evidently referring to his several relapses: "Doctor, I wonder how many more stations I will have to stop at." Dr. Boynton says the President looks better and feels better this morning. The doctors' hope is strengthened, owing to the fact that the President has held his own through another day and night. He will feel content and satisfied with a continuance of this stationary period for a few days. After that he hopes the work of repair and recuperation will commence. At this hour the surgeons report the condition quite as favorable as at the morning examination.

HAMILTON HAILED.

New York, 29.—From the Graphic: Hamilton arrived this morning and said to a reporter: "I think you will be satisfied if I tell you the President is going to get well."

There is no doubt of it in your mind, doctor? None whatever now. I have no time now to dwell at length on the subject and beg you will excuse me. The worst has passed away.

Is there any indication that an abscess has formed on the President's lungs, and has one been discovered in one of the joints of his limbs as indicated in the morning papers? Neither report is true, replied the doctor, and furthermore there is not the slightest indication of either.

Washington, 29, Executive Mansion, 12.1 p.m.—Rumors were again this morning that an examination had been made of the President's lungs, and unmistakable evidence in the shape of pus accumulation was discovered of the secondary or pyemic stages of blood poisoning. At noon, Dr. Rebyrn said: Since the President's condition became so low, we have examined his lungs carefully every day, and always found them healthy. The report that pus cavities have formed there is entirely unfounded. There are no new complications whatever in the President's case and no unfavorable features which are not already known. He continues to do well.

Executive Mansion, 3 p.m.—At the morning dressing of the President, an additional point of suppuration was recognized in the swollen face, which being incised gave exit to some healthy looking pus. Other open points on the exterior of the swelling are likewise discharging, but though less tense the tumefaction has not materially diminished in size. Nothing new has been observed in the condition of the wound. The usual rise of temperature has not yet occurred, and the general condition is not materially changed. Pulse 104, temperature 98.6, respiration 18.

BLISSFUL.

New York, 29.—The Times' Washington special covers the following important points: In conversation, last night, with Dr. Bliss, the doctor was asked, is there any danger of other glands being attacked? I have personally gone carefully over all the surgical records of the war with the view to that very question, besides which my personal experience with gunshot wounds has been very large, and I don't know of any instance where a second gland fever became involved through traumatic parotitis. That never occurs except in cases of distinct pyemia, which the President never has had. There has been no other swelling, even of the lymphatic glands, so far as I have been able to discover. There have been a few eruptions on the back, caused by blood poisoning, but they were not glandular and they have subsided. The bullet has given no trouble and will give none. Ultimately it will be removed. It has changed its position since it entered the body, and has worked its way downward to the vicinity of the rectum. We know pretty well where it is. I do not think it is imbedded in any of the muscular tissues. Of course if it is removed it will be by operation, but it will not be a severe one.

PAINFUL PROCEEDINGS.

Post's Washington: As hope returns more is learned in detail of the terrible anxiety of last Friday. It appears that the surgeons, after learning the symptoms of the morning, decided that it was useless to longer continue the struggle, and two of their number were selected to wait upon Mrs. Garfield and inform her that medical science could do no more, and that she must prepare for the worst. The interview which occurred between these sur-
